Seminar Title: Team Excellence

Consider the very best team that you were ever part of. It might be the current work team that you contribute to. It may have been a few years ago now. It may well be a sports team that you were involved with at school or college. What essential elements were in place that made this such a good team?

This seminar speaks directly to the essential elements that need to exist for a team to excel – clarity of direction; alignment; high trust; openness to new ideas; a self correcting control mechanism and a spirit of celebration when results were achieved.

We all know that teams can achieve much more than the work of any lone individual. This seminar addresses how traditional onsite teams, project based teams, matrix based or even virtual teams can consistently apply proven team principals to create the kind of synergy and creative cooperation vital in today's globally competitive marketplace.
